Resettlement
February 2026

Resettlement is the transfer of refugees from a country of asylum to another country that has agreed to admit them and grant permanent residence. It is both a durable solution and a key protection tool, and represents an important act of responsibility-sharing and solidarity with Jordan.

UNHCR identifies the most vulnerable refugees, assesses their eligibility, submits cases to receiving countries, supports selection missions conducted by resettlement States, and facilitates departure arrangements in line with available quotas.

In Jordan, approximately 32,000 refugees are in need of resettlement—around 7 per cent of the refugee population. However, due to the limited number of available places globally, fewer than 1 per cent can ultimately be considered for resettlement.
