UNHCR works in collaboration with IOM and the Relief & Rehabilitation Commission of the Government of South Sudan to collect data on new arrivals from Sudan.

More information on this joint initiative can be found: Population Movement from Sudan to South Sudan

Points of entry: where people first enter South Sudan. Border/flow monitoring led by RRC, IOM and UNHCR starts here. The response priority is to facilitate onward movement from the border areas which are extremely remote with little infrastructure. UNHCR and partners are providing life-saving assistance and assisting the most vulnerable with transportation to the transit center.

Transit centers: temporary sites in transit locations where the most vulnerable population are assisted with essential services while waiting for onward transportation. Refugees upon identification will be assisted and transported to the existing refugee settlements and camps. As majority of the arrivals are South Sudanese refugee returnees, the focus of UNHCR and partners is to assist the most vulnerable group while supporting the government to decongest the border/transit areas and expand options for onward movement.

This flow from points of entry to transit centers and camps is operational in Upper Nile State. A similar flow and the related service provision is being set up in Unity and Northern Bahr Ghazal States.
