Jijiga, Ethiopia 41,633 6,942

Population statistics as of 30 April 2013

UNHCR Sub Office in Jijiga was opened following the arrival of Somali refugees to Ethiopia in the early 1990s. The influx increased significantly with the fall of the Siad Barre Regime in 1991 which led to the establishment of nine refugee camps at the eastern border of Ethiopia. The total population of Somali refugees at that time was over half a million, namely 628,000 persons. A few years later, most of these refugees were able to return to their places of origin. Following the voluntary repatriation that took place from 1997 until 2005, only Kebribeyah refugee camp remained open, hosting over 16,000 refugees. However, in December 2006, following the new outbreak of violence in Somalia, the operation restarted after receiving 833 new refugee families in Hartisheik seeking asylum. A new camp site was found in Aw-barre to house the new refugees. After Aw-barre camp was full to capacity in early 2008, the government started directing asylum-seekers to Lafaiisa transit centre in March 2008. To relocate the newly arrived refugees, UNHCR jointly with the Government - ARRA - opened a new camp site at Sheder in May 2008.

Pugnido refugee camp is a protracted refugee caseload where considerable number of refugees repatriated in 2006-2008 after the signing of the Comprehensive peace agreement (CPA) in 2005. However, due to the recent conflict between Lou-Nuer and Murules in Denjog, and its surrounding areas in the Jonglei state and bordering state of Upper Nile in South Sudan, up to 13,314 individuals have been fully registered issued with identity cards and assisted alongside the old case load, thus justifying characterizing the operation both as protracted and as emergency. The caseload is not characterized by their religious affiliation. Majority of the Nuers are Protestants, Anuaks are either Catholics or Protestants with very small number of Muslims. While Anuaks speak the Angua language with few groups of this tribe also have a good knowledge of the Arabic language. The Nuer, currently the majority populations in the camp speak mainly Nuer language. The minorities speak mainly Arabic, Denka and shiluk. The refugee population in Pugnido is mainly rural pastoralists with the women undertaking petty trading in the community.
