NEEDS

Rising numbers of refugees are weighing heavily on public health services as well as UNRWA and NGO supported clinics. Many refugees are already in need of health care when they arrive in Lebanon. Others develop health care needs during their stay; often exacerbated by poor living conditions.

While Syrian refugees and Lebanese returnees have access to the public and private health care system in Lebanon, many cannot afford the fees for these services and transportation to health facilities. Some NGOs offer primary health care services free of charge, but the number of beneficiaries covered is limited. Other partners provide assist refugees with treatment costs, however due to rising levels of poverty many refugees are unable to afford the co-payment.

Existing primary health care centres lack capacity to meet the needs. The current supply of medicines for acute and chronic diseases is insufficient to cover the rising demand, while prevention and control of disease outbreak in view of crowded living conditions, poor water and sanitation, presents a challenge. Recent confirmed cases of polio in Syria raise considerable public health concern, given poor immunization rates in some areas.

Secondary and tertiary health care in Lebanon is expensive and the majority of refugees are not able to cover the cost of hospitalization. Additional support is urgently needed to
