

Over the hot summer months UNICEF is continuing to provide a water, sanitation and hygiene response in Syria, Lebanon, Jordan and Iraq. In Syria UNICEF, with sector partners, is supporting water access in areas where control of water is increasingly being used in the war in Damascus, Rural Damascus, Aleppo and Dara governorates. UNICEF is providing water trucking, rehabilitation of wells and fuel to power systems. In Aleppo city, where water access has been dramatically reduced particularly for populations in collective shelters and populations further from piped water networks, water trucking is supporting 300,000 people. In Jordan in the last month UNICEF and partners have handed over a water system to improve water access for over 500,000 people.

Despite the fact that UNICEF has received 55% of the funds required for the humanitarian response inside Syria and to Syrian refugees in neighbouring countries, further funding is required to meet the needs with vulnerabilities continuing to increase across the region.
