

Situation

- During the month President Iván Duque extended the national Mandatory Preventive Isolation on two occasions. On 8 April, the isolation was extended until 27 April through decree 531¹, and again on 24 April when an extension of the measure was issued until 11 May, under decree 593². The use of face masks in all public spaces was made mandatory. Air, land and river borders with Ecuador, Brazil, Peru and Venezuela remained closed. Construction and manufacturing sectors resumed activities, while taking into account Ministry of Health's biosafety protocols. Air transport continued to be suspended, with an exception for humanitarian flights. On 6 April, the National Government introduced a balance sheet³ on the coordinated response to COVID-19 in Colombia, outlining six key points related to the assistance to refugees and migrants: responsible and humanitarian management of the border, guaranteed access to health care, adaptation of humanitarian assistance programmes, assistance for vulnerable population groups, programmes targeting highly impacted municipalities, and increased information efforts.
- According to Colombia Migration, around 14,000 Venezuelans had returned to their country by 29 April⁴, through the Simón Bolívar International Bridge in Norte de Santander and the José Antonio Páez International Bridge in Arauca. The department stressed that the disorderly departure of Venezuelans cannot be allowed as it exposes Colombians to future risks.

Feature story: "One mom, four paths to learn"

Claudia^{*}, a woman determined and hopeful to find a better life for her daughters, decided to leave them under their mother's care and set out her journey to Colombia. Unexpectedly for her, this road brought her one more child.

Claudia, who is 27 years old, has four children: three girls (9, 7 and 4 years old) and a boy (2), for whom she fights every day so that they have better opportunities than the ones she has had. At first, she arrived in Santa Marta, in the department of Magdalena. There, she was able to work selling fruit juices, helping in the showers at the beach and as a waitress, so that she could send money to her daughters in Venezuela. Then, she became pregnant and left her work to take care of her child. Fortunately, the father of her youngest son, got a job in Uribia, in La Guajira, so they decided to move there.

Before arriving in Uribia, Claudia went to Venezuela in search of her daughters, amidst conditions that were even more difficult than they were when she left. Her youngest daughter (Valentina) did not remember her. It was a happy and painful reunion at the same time.

In Uribia, not having a profession made it more difficult for her to get a job; also, her husband became unemployed shortly after their arrival, which affected the income of their household: "The baby was two months old. I could not find a job, because I had no qualifications and no career, so we lived only from the occasional jobs he did".

Months later, her husband got another job in the north of La Guajira, and he decided to take Claudia's three daughters within their household, as his own. Claudia has always kept her children's education as a priority, because she considers it as the most important thing for their future. However, she must work hard to get the funds to buy school supplies and uniforms.

She found out about VenEsperanza because a neighbor told her that they were collecting information from Venezuelan refugees and migrants for a workshop on "resilient minds". In this workshop, people told about their experiences during their journeys from Venezuela; she felt very grateful because in the midst of everything, because for her the journey went well: "They put us to walk among sandpaper, stones, cotton and that helped us identify how we felt on the road here. Many people spoke of a bad experience, many were robbed on the way, others were not so well received. Particularly for me, thank God, it went well".

Two weeks after the workshop, she received her first financial support, with which she started a lunch shop that did not go well. Instead of continuing with the business, Claudia decided to invest in her education. She validated her high school diploma and afterwards started technical studies in "Social and Community Management", a profession for which she has gift and vocation. Due to the quarantine and following the government's isolation measures, she continued her studies through virtual classes.

In the future she hopes, through her career, to be able to help more people, as she keeps seeking for a more stable life to give her children better living conditions: "I would like to have my own house, a room for each of my children, so that they are comfortable, and when I have my 'technician' title, I will be able to help my partner, who is currently responsible for the expenses".

In April, more than 38,600 beneficiaries received one or more protection services from 40 RMRP direct and implementing partners, in 66 municipalities of 21 departments, in border and transit areas, as well as areas where refugees and migrants have an intention to stay. The protection sector continues to identify and activate referral pathways and offers protection services through responses adapted to preventive isolation measures. The members continue to monitor and follow up, both directly and remotely, potential violations of the rights of refugees and migrants, that can affect the protection response and health measures. The response remains focused on evictions, possible abuses by authorities, gender-based violence (GBV), xenophobia, child protection, and an increase in returns due to COVID-19 and related measures remain a priority.

More than 14,200 people were contacted through information and awareness-raising activities on prevention, mitigation and response to protection risks of boys, girls and adolescents in the context of mixed migratory flows; and 9,100 refugees and migrants received legal assistance, representation or advice. Additionally, more than 9,000 people, including refugees, migrants and host communities received services in various Support Spaces, and over 7,800 people accessed protection services such as support and guidance on how to access rights and assistance. Refugees and migrants also accessed two-way communication mechanisms to express their needs, concerns and feedback.

Over 5,500 girls and boys received specialized child protection services, to prevent and respond to violations of rights during their migration process, including access to care and shelter spaces for unaccompanied children and/or adolescents often living on the street, in close coordination with the Colombian Institute of Family Welfare. More than 2,700 persons at risk of trafficking participated in

In March, more than 372,100 beneficiaries received one or more types of food and nutrition assistance through 61 RMRP direct and implementing partners, in 41 municipalities of 18 departments, in border and transit areas, as well as areas where refugees and migrants have an intention to stay. As the operation continues to be adapt according to the diverse response modalities, the increasing demand for assistance is being managed and prioritized according to the GIFMM partners' operational capacity, in order to respond to the demands for food assistance, prevention of nutritional deficiencies and support to communities for the recovery of their livelihoods.

REPORT

More than 203,700 people were reached with food assistance, reaching more than 150,900 people through transfers (>106,500 with vouchers, >11,600 in cash and >32,700 with other mechanisms), and in kind (>52,800). Food rations were delivered to more than 105,200 people, while more than 26,900 children and adolescents received school feeding through modified delivery modalities, such as food baskets for home cooking. In addition, hot meals served in community kitchens were provided to more than 12,100 people, and over than 700 people transiting by foot ("caminantes") received food kits. Additionally, activities related to the promotion of food self-sufficiency were carried out, benefitting over 18,000 people, including more than 13,300 people who received agricultural tools, seeds and cultivation materials, including fertilizers and veterinary supplies, as well as over 4,600 people who

Local Coordination

Local GIFMMs, the field level representation of the national platform, are spaces for strategic coordination of the operational response at the local level, working in close collaboration with the local authorities' coordination mechanisms.

- Local GIFMMs were in close coordination with local authorities and the Presidency Border Management to respond to urgent humanitarian needs and to ensure the effectiveness of the preventive isolation, as well as the measures to prevent the spread of COVID-19. This included support to local administrations for the delivery of 200,000 food supplies sent by the National Government for refugees, migrants and host communities in vulnerable situations to be delivered in 40 municipalities. More than 800,000 people benefited from the assistance, which was also coordinated with mayor's offices, departmental governments, the Presidency Border Management and the National Unit for Disaster Management (UNGRD, by its Spanish acronym).
- In Bogotá, the response was focused on temporary shelters for 318 people in four equipped structures, nutrition, multipurpose transfers, deliveries of hygiene kits and other in-kind supplies, in continued coordination with the Mayor's Office.
- The Mayor's Offices in the municipalities of Ipiales and Pasto and local GIFMM in Nariño provided response to expand the provision of temporary shelters during quarantine. In April, local authorities of both municipalities have ensured the assistance with food deliveries, primary health care, and hygiene kits, as well as coordinated protection assistance for 227 people in 8 temporary shelters. Multipurpose transfers, food kits and vouchers for refugees, migrants and host communities were also delivered in prioritized neighborhoods. Similarly, the Health Secretary's Office and hospitals in Ipiales have received support with technical assistance, specialized professionals, the delivery of around 2,000 personal protection items and biosafety, cleaning, and disinfection supplies, medicines and provision of areas to expand the hospital area.
- In the municipality of Necoclí in Antioquia, the local GIFMM is accompanying 350 people who are part of the mixed flows in transiting exiting to Central and North America, most of them accommodated in a Temporary Preventive Isolation Zone, where additional assistance with food deliveries, hydration, biosecurity elements, health care and other supplies is needed. The GIFMM, in close coordination with local authorities, has provided health care for 450 people staying in two coliseums in Medellín, and 2,900 families benefited from the expansion of the response with multipurpose transfers in Medellín and Apartadó.
- In Norte de Santander, the local GIFMM supported the characterization and integral attention days in the La Parada sector in Villa del Rosario, and in informal settlements in Cúcuta. In Santander, support was provided to expand the hospital area at the University Hospital in Bucaramanga. Food, hydration and hygiene kits were distributed to the refugee and migrant population in the Water Park, in coordination with local authorities.
- The local GIFMM in Valle del Cauca was part of the adaptation of a place for temporary shelter, for which deliveries in kind were provided, including non-food items, financing for food assistance, and technical assistance with the production of reports about recommendations for its proper functioning. In addition, activities for the identification of beneficiaries and deliveries of food assistance (650 food packages) were carried out.
