SITUATION

By end-2020, Peru is expected to host some 1.05 million refugees and migrants from Venezuela. To mitigate the spread of COVID-19, in March 2020, the country closed its borders. In the absence of regular pathways to access the country, refugees and migrants resorted to entering the country irregularly. This has heightened protection risks, including those related to human trafficking, smuggling and gender-based violence (GBV).

The socioeconomic impact of the pandemic has substantially increased unemployment and poverty rates among refugees and migrants from Venezuela, who are now in dire need of humanitarian assistance, in particular food security and nutrition, shelter, WASH, access to healthcare and mental health support, as well as education. Refugees and migrants need to meet these basic needs to ensure better access to durable solutions such as integration and self-reliance.

The Government continues to show great solidarity towards refugees and migrants. In October 2020, the Ministry of Interior enacted Supreme Decree 010-2020-IN approving exceptional and temporal measures to regularize foreigners whose stay permits expired or who entered the country irregularly. Hosting some 500,000 asylum seekers from Venezuela, and while the processing of asylum claims has been suspended for most of 2020 the Government is developing a new 'humanitarian residence' regime that will be open for these asylum seekers in 2021.

RESPONSE PRIORITIES

- 1 Provide and improve access to essential goods, such as food, Cash and Voucher Assistance - CVA (including for rental assistance) and services such as healthcare and education, that serve to address immediate basic needs in a complementary and coordinated manner, and in support of national and local authorities.
- 2 Contribute to integration opportunities for refugees and migrants, using age, gender and diversity approaches to increase access to livelihood opportunities, enhance efforts to recognize foreign academic degrees, and promote entrepreneurship while reducing discrimination and xenophobia.
- 3 Prevent, mitigate and respond to protection risks and improve effective access to territory, documentation and regularization in order to increase access to rights, especially for vulnerable groups, including survivors of GBV, unaccompanied and separated children, the elderly, persons with disabilities and chronic illnesses, and members of the LGBTQI+ community.

The activities respond to humanitarian, protection and integration needs of refugees and migrants from Venezuela staying in the country or in-transit, and their host communities. These activities focus mainly on Lima, where 80 per cent of the refugee and migrant population resides, border areas, and main cities like Arequipa, Cusco, Piura, Tacna, Trujillo and Tumbes where local capacities are overstretched.
