UNHCR has further strengthened the response to Afghan nationals in the state of São Paulo. In November, part of this work involved supporting Brazilian authorities to comprehensively map the needs and challenges of Afghan refugees so that suitable interventions could be designed.

In this sense, on 3 November, UNHCR participated in the public hearing organized by the Permanent Joint Commission on International Migration and Refugees (CMMIR) of the National Congress to discuss the current scenario of Afghan nationals arriving in the country. UNHCR provided an overview of this emergency and emphasized the importance of the humanitarian visa policy adopted by the Brazilian Government for the protection of Afghans. UNHCR also further illustrated actions that are being explored with partners and state authorities, including expanding shelter opportunities nationwide and engaging with the private sector to promote livelihood opportunities.

As a result, on 9 November, CMMIR chose to present to the 2023 budget bill a proposal for the allocation of USD 28 million to the Ministry of Defense for humanitarian reception actions, such as the setting up of temporary accommodation spaces and food supply, among other initiatives.

Likewise, in November, a new operational model was introduced by the Municipality of Guarulhos in the airport, following UNHCR's advocacy and technical guidance. Under the new approach, UNHCR is now maintaining a daily presence at the airport for the timely identification and orientation of new arrivals and their referral to shelters and other services. So far, the new model has been a success: the number of people staying at GRU has drastically reduced and over 200 relocations of Afghans to public and civil society shelters were carried out, including to Todos Irmãos temporary shelter in Guarulhos and Aldeias Infantis SOS in Poá - both facilities funded by UNHCR.

Research addresses labor opportunities for Venezuelans in Roraima and Manaus

From discrimination to language barriers, refugees and migrants face various challenges when trying to integrate the labour market. In a time where countries are facing high unemployment rates and economies are not fully recovered from the COVID-19 pandemic, finding a job becomes even more difficult.

That said, in the capitals of Manaus and in the state of Roraima, the services, agriculture and industry sectors have the capacity for absorbing Venezuelan refugee and migrant labour force, providing these communities with decent work environments and human dignity. This is what emerged in the research "Promotion of autonomy and local integration of Venezuelan refugees and migrants in Roraima and Manaus: productive sector and opportunities", launched on 21 November.

The study was conducted by UNHCR, Polis Pesquisa, and AVSI, with support from the Public Labor Prosecution Service of Amazonas and Roraima (MPT-AM/RR). The research not only analyses the job opportunities in these regions, but also shows that employers in these states are already benefiting from the cultural exchange and knowledge brought by these professionals. In this regard, interviewed employers brought up positive aspects of this workforce, evaluating that refugees are willing to move wherever there are job opportunities, are hardworking in learning and performing tasks, have good interpersonal skills, in addition to being able to bring new cultures and innovation capacity to the workplace.

The 16 Days of Activism is an annual and international campaign to mobilize individuals and organizations worldwide to prevent and eliminate violence against women and girls. It begins on 25 November, on the International Day for the Elimination of Violence against Women, and runs until 10 December, International Human Rights Day.

In Brazil, the campaign involves a series of information and awareness-raising activities for preventing gender-based violence and encouraging women's economic empowerment nationwide. For its launch, UNHCR in Manaus facilitated the special orange lighting of the Amazonas Theatre, followed by focus group discussions in different neighborhoods on women's empowerment and peaceful coexistence. As for Boa Vista, the campaign kicked off with several focus group discussions on positive masculinities and gendered economic violence.

Furthermore, UNHCR invited 14 Brazilian female athletes from six Brazilian football teams and four volleyball squads to share messages on gender-based violence on UNHCR's social media accounts to expand the outreach of the 16 Days of Activism campaign to an even more diversified audience.

Key partners visiting Brazil and better knowing UNHCR's work

In November, UNHCR supported the field visits of key partners of UNHCR Brazil. From 14 to 18 November, UNHCR accompanied the delegation of its largest donor, the United States of America through the Bureau of Population, Refugees, and Migration (PRM) from the US Department of State. The delegation had the opportunity to see firsthand how the joint response for Venezuelan refugees and migrants is coordinated on the ground and meet with the people we serve in Operation Welcome spaces in Boa Vista, Pacaraima, and Manaus. The agenda also covered some key integration initiatives supported by UNHCR and partners, as well as interagency briefings with UN agencies.

From 23 to 25 November, it was the time for the World Bank to visit Roraima and better understand the work being done in reception facilities and emergency shelters, specifically discussing livelihoods initiatives on site. The institution has three ongoing joint research projects with UNHCR, and it was important for them to get a closer look at the challenges faced by Venezuelan refugees and migrants in their economic integration pathways in Brazil.

On 30 November, UNHCR accompanied the visit to Boa Vista of a delegation composed of the Directorate-General for European Civil Protection and Humanitarian Aid Operations (ECHO) and the Service for Foreign Policy Instruments (FPI) representatives. The field visit was an opportunity to showcase how European Union's contributions assist UNHCR in responding to the needs of Venezuelan refugees and migrants, especially through reception, protection, and shelter support.

Donation Day!

On 29 November, UNHCR's supporters Letícia Spiller, Danni Suzuki and player Marcelo Vieira engaged in the #DiaDeDoar solidarity movement and supported UNHCR Brazil's #ComidaPraViagem campaign, with a special appeal to refugees who face hunger and food insecurity in the world. More than 1.7 million people were reached by the action.
