EDUCATION: INCREASING EFFORTS TO PROMOTE ACCESS AND ATTENDANCE

- Lebanon - An increased number of refugee children in the Bekaa are working in the fields following the start of the potato and onion harvest season. The harvest season has disrupted non-formal education programmes, normally provided to over 23,300 children, many of whom reside in informal settlements. UNICEF and its partners continue to engage in dialogues with refugees as well as host communities in order to ensure the continuity of children's learning.
- Jordan - In Zaatari camp, UNICEF and Save the Children Jordan conducted nearly 30 focus group discussions with religious leaders and community members to develop new key messages for the new "Back to School" campaign that will start in August. In Emirates Jordan camp, distribution of stationery and payment of fees are ongoing for primary and secondary school exams and for summer remedial classes led by Norwegian Refugee Council (NRC). In the Youth Centre, UNICEF and NRC have implemented the mid-year exam for technical youth training (electric and tailoring training). Successful participants graduated on 29 May.
- Egypt - On 25 May, UNHCR signed an agreement with the Ministry of Education to assist in the absorption of Syrian children into the public education system. Through the joint agreement, UNHCR is supporting the refurbishment of existing classrooms and construction of new teaching spaces in nine schools in areas with a high concentration of Syrian refugees.
- Iraq - UNHCR continues to follow up with UNICEF on the condition of primary schools in the camps. Notably, the harsh climatic conditions affected the tents in Qushtapa and Darashakran camps and there's an urgent need to replace the tents with a more permanent structure. Issues with infrastructure, lack of water, and poor sanitation conditions in and around the schools continue to raise concerns on the part of refugee councils and camp management.

JORDAN: ENHANCING OPPORTUNITIES FOR LEARNING IN AZRAQ CAMP

- Formal education - NRC in partnership with UNICEF has begun providing the first learning opportunities to vulnerable Syrian refugee children through its Education Programme, launched in late May, in Azraq. The UNICEF-supported school under the jurisdiction of the Ministry of Education (MoE) is not set to open until the start of the next school year in September, but with some 6,000 residents, there is a vital need to support children in the camp.
- NRC registered more than 290 children in the first week and will temporarily use the site of the MoE school. The NRC-UNICEF programme will ensure that refugee children impacted by the now more than three years of conflict in Syria do not fall further behind and critically gives a sense of normalcy to children in an isolated refugee camp. "Catch-up" classes in Arabic, English, Math and Science are based on the Jordanian curriculum and taught by Jordanian teachers. NRC is also providing children with recreational and sports activities.
- Informal education - In partnership with UNICEF, Relief International (RI) is providing an education programme to Syrian refugee children in Azraq Camp. The programme aims to help children to overcome their current challenges to academic progress and adopt skills for a better future. Since 11 May, RI is providing informal education activities for youth aged 12 -18 years, aiming to build literacy, numeracy, life skills, recreational activities and coping skills for these out of school children. The project employs Jordanians from Zarqa Governorate and Syrian refugees from the camp as teachers, case managers, and community mobilizers.

ZAATARI CAMP VERIFICATION OF REGISTERED POPULATION

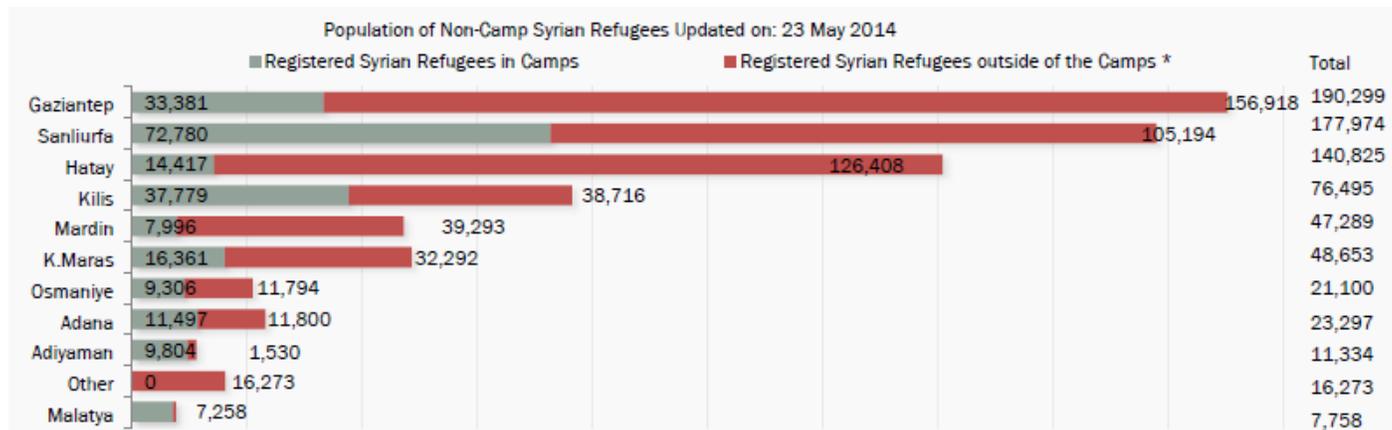

- The main phase of population verification exercise in Zaatari was completed on 21 May. With the addition of the refugees who arrived in Zaatari after 22 March, it is estimated that the final population of the camp will be between 85,000 and 90,000 Syrian refugees.
- The introduction of biometrics registration in Zaatari has helped UNHCR to identify duplicate registrations and refugees who have spontaneously left the camp. Refugees are inactivated if they fail to present themselves to UNHCR for verification within ten days after their scheduled appointment or have duplicate files in the registration database.
- Verifications will continue during an additional period of one month to process the cases of individuals who are on hold for different reasons.

EGYPT: SYRIANS RISK LIVES ATTEMPTING TO DEPART IRREGULARLY FOR EUROPE

- On 22 May, the Italian Navy assisted 488 people (which included 247 Syrians) to shore in Augusta (Sicily) after the two ships they were travelling on experienced serious difficulties. One of the ships had disembarked from Egypt near Alexandria 12 days earlier. Smugglers had loaded the passengers onto small wooden boats which carried them out to the high sea. Passengers were then transferred to a ferry that transported them to the main vessel that carried them on the rest of the journey.
- UNHCR is aware of 96 Syrians who were arrested for attempting to irregularly depart Egypt and are in detention in Alexandria and its surrounding governorates. As part of positive trend, however, Egyptian authorities have been conducting regular releases of people from detention shortly after their arrest. Those released consist mostly of families, children, the elderly and those with immediate relatives in Egypt. Egyptian authorities are reportedly issuing three-month residency permits to Syrians who are being released. UNHCR’s implementing partners Caritas and Resala have been providing emergency assistance to detainees, including food, blankets and medical care.

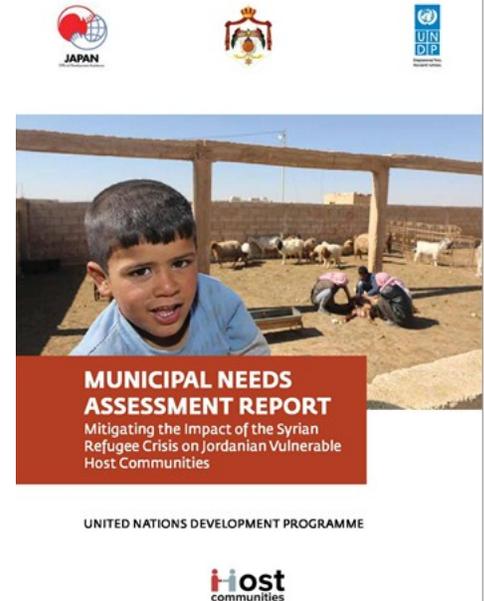

TURKEY: STRENGTHENING MEASURES TO ASSIST GROWING REFUGEE POPULATION

- The Government of Turkey undertakes registration and extends Temporary Protection to all Syrians in Turkey. There are currently some 220,000 Syrian refugees accommodated and assisted in 22 camps located across ten provinces. Refugees residing in camps managed by AFAD are provided with food, shelter, education, basic services and medical assistance. Most camps have reached capacity.
- In Ceylanpinar camp, a vocational course on the care and maintenance of electrical items has been established. About 18 males are currently reported to be attending the course, where they repair electrical items belonging to camp residents under the supervision of two technicians. In addition, there are also 331 (214 female and 117 male) camp residents attending various other vocational courses such as computer, hairdressing, textile and handicrafts classes.
- Significant efforts are also being made at local levels to address the needs of the increasing numbers of the urban population through registration activities. The Government has registered more than 540,000 Syrians living outside of camps. Registration is still ongoing in many urban centres across the country, and the number of Syrian refugees is likely to continue to increase.
- International Medical Corps is running five clinics in southern Turkey to provide medical services to non-camp Syrians (two in Kilis and one in each Merson, Nizip and Reyhanli). IMC is also finalizing the process to open a new clinic in Sanliurfa province, which will provide physiotherapy as well as health services. IMC has also provided medical equipment to both Ceylanpinar and Viransehir camps.

UNDP: NEEDS ASSESSMENT OF MOST AFFECTED HOST COMMUNITIES IN JORDAN

- UNDP completed a needs assessment in 36 municipalities across Irbid and Mafrqa governorates to better understand the needs of host communities and gauge public perception about the Syrian refugee crisis. The study focused on the needs of the host communities in relation to the delivery of municipal services (solid waste management, water, sanitation, infrastructure), Government services (education, healthcare) and other issues (employment, housing, environment, and agriculture).
- The findings indicate similar challenges across municipalities in Jordan's northern Governorates, with some variations.
- The report finds that challenges regarding the delivery of municipal services pre-empted the crisis, but such challenges have been severely compounded due to the influx of refugees. The assessment concluded that solid waste collection and disposal is the most affected sector in most municipalities. Consequently, waste management is the first priority for interventions in the municipalities of Irbid and Mafrqa governorates.
- Findings are based on both a quantitative survey and qualitative focus group discussions with municipal councils, women representatives, youth and tribal leaders. The survey was designed to assess the municipal needs and challenges from an official and technical perspective, focusing on the support needed for public service delivery, while focus group discussions were designed to assess the needs of regular citizens and to detect signs of tensions or antagonism towards Syrian refugees.

The regional response for refugees fleeing Syria is the coordinated effort of 157 participating organizations, including 105 appealing agencies:
