Highlights

- No new official figures reported by the Government of Turkey on November 14, 2012, however, according to information from authorities the number of Syrians registered and staying in 14 camps in seven provinces increased to 117,811 persons including 684 who are undertaking medical treatment in hospitals.
- Additional to those who are staying in the camps, there is also an estimated number of some 8,000-9,000 Syrians who have been registered in the camps but moved out on permission and staying with their relatives in urban and there are also about 70,000 who are living in urban in privately rented accommodations which brings the overall total to about more than 200,000.
- According to Government officials, there is an ongoing identification of those increasing in the urban settings as the numbers coming who stay in camps is not fully representative and many new arrivals are opting to stay instead in the urban settings. Reportedly, some 9,000-10,000 are already identified in Kilis and the process is on going in other areas like Gaziantep and towns of Şanlıurfa for those who crossed recently due to the clashes in Ras Al-Ayn.
- Reportedly, during the 48 hrs of 12-14 November, 3,406 Syrians have arrived to Turkey and 386 Syrians have returned to Syria voluntarily. It was reported by the camp officials that there were some spontaneous arrivals who crossed the borders and approached directly to the camps where they already knew they have relatives staying and were admitted and registered by the camp officials. According to the local authorities, despite the clashes in both Ras Al-Ayn across Ceylanpınar and Ayn Al-Arab across Mürşitpınar Suruç, there has been no mass influx of crossings to Turkey but in smaller numbers. Reportedly among those who crossed to Turkey there were eight wounded and one died in the hospital.
