NEEDS

Kurdistan Region, northern Iraq

The significant number of new arrivals has placed immense pressure on shelter and other infrastructure in Domiz. It is expected that by the end of 2013, an estimated number of 50,000 Syrian refugees will arrive to the central and southern Governorates of Iraq, which will place a considerable pressure on the existing camps and also on host communities.

UNHCR and relevant partners were drafting the winterization plan for all camps as well as for non-camp refugees. We are also assuming that the current arrival trend continues to the end of the year and therefore we will have a total caseload of approximately 300,000 refugees arriving into the Kurdistan region. Using the previously agreed split of Non Camp (60%) to Camp (40%) caseload, we are planning to support up to 180,000 Non Camp refugees and 120,000 Camp refugees as part of winterisation activities.

UNHCR in cooperation with local authorities (DMC and ERC) is planning and developing drainage systems in various camp locations.
