

Country Refugee and Resilience Abstract (“Annex C”)

This template is intended to assist in providing an initial indicative draft summary of the 3RP for stakeholders, including donors, ahead of the development of the full 3RP country chapters. Further guidelines and templates have been developed by the drafting committee, in consultation with relevant national stakeholders, to guide the finalization of the chapters.

As the 3RP suggests using existing coordination platform(s) at the national level and calls for synergies between the Refugee and Resilience components by using the same sector working groups, it is advisable that the Refugee and Resilience components address common objectives.

To allow donors to easily identify and respond to different needs in the resilience and refugee components, however, these common objectives can be broken down between the two components at the output level. The synergies and degree of integration between the two components may vary from country to country taking into account the different impact of the crisis at the national and community level as well as ongoing planning processes.

Sector strategies should be in consonance with relevant national processes or plans.

Within the overall strategic vision of addressing refugee protection and assistance needs and to build resilience of impacted communities and national systems, the following are the specific goals of the two Components of the 3RP. These Goals are one of the key points of guidance in helping Sectors to determine which specific Outputs and activities might fall under each Component. For more information see the Guidance Note on the Refugee and Resilience Components of the 3RP.

Refugee Component	Resilience Component
1. Refugee women, girls, boys, and men fleeing the Syrian conflict have access to effective protection.	4. The most vulnerable impacted households and communities benefit from interventions that enhance their capacities and resources.
2. Refugees and the most vulnerable among the impacted population are provided with life-saving and immediate assistance, including in camps and host communities.	5. Refugees and members of impacted communities have opportunities to progressively build self-reliance.
3. The most vulnerable impacted communities benefit from immediate support to strengthen communal services to support community-based protection.	6. The capacities of sub-national and national delivery systems are strengthened to meet the protection, assistance and social services needs of refugees and members of impacted communities.
