

Demand for health services from Syrian refugees continues to place a large burden on national health systems across the region. The focus of the 3RP health strategy is twofold; strengthening the capacity of public health infrastructure to cope with the large caseload of Syrian refugees, and providing direct and targeted support to the most vulnerable populations who lack access to critical health services.

During the first quarter of 2017, 561,000 people received primary health care consultations, which represents 11 per cent of the overall target for 2017. Some 44,500 were referred to secondary or tertiary health care. Also during the same period of time more than 321,500 received vaccination.

At the end of the first quarter the Health Sector received 15 per cent of the required funds for 2017, this is USD 57 million of the required USD 373 million. Lack of funds reduces direct support for health services, and slows investment in resilient services.
