HIGHLIGHTS

With over 5.5 million Syrian refugees hosted in 3RP countries, upholding non-refoulement and ensuring access to safety remain of vital importance in 2018, in addition to strengthening national systems and capacity, promoting gender equality in national legal frameworks, and providing protection from sexual exploitation and abuse. Programming and advocacy for civil status documentation will also continue to be prioritized given the vital role that legal documentation plays in enabling refugees to better cope with the effects of displacement, to reduce the risk of statelessness, and to facilitates access to durable solutions. With 2.5 million Syrian refugee children, their protection remains a core element of the protection response. Resettlement and complementary pathways for legal admission to third countries remain key to securing durable solutions for vulnerable refugees. In this respect, continued engagement from resettlement countries plays a key role in sharing responsibilities with host countries to address the region's humanitarian needs and preserve protection space.

HIGHLIGHTS

A focus on strengthening agricultural livelihoods and shift towards resilience-building are core elements of Sector plans. However, after six years of protracted crisis, widespread unemployment, inflation, lack of formal livelihood opportunities, and natural resource degradation persist, is continuing to undermine the food security of the most vulnerable. As a consequence, by the end of 2017 Food Security Partners were reaching a record 2.5 million beneficiaries monthly with food assistance, a 25 per cent increase on the 2016 end of year figure. In Lebanon, the food insecurity situation of displaced Syrians remains critical, with little change in the past year; 91 per cent of households present some level of food insecurity compared with 93 per cent in 2016. Meanwhile in Jordan, over half of Syrian refugees (53 per cent) have poor or borderline food consumption - a dramatic increase from 2016 (19 per cent). This is explained by a reduction in refugees' purchasing power, forcing them to consume foods with less nutritional value in order to meet their basic food needs. Across the region the continual provision of direct food assistance therefore remains vital in supporting vulnerable families.

HIGHLIGHTS

In February 2018, 3RP partners have continued working towards ensuring increased access to safe, equitable and quality education for children and youth. In Turkey, a new Remedial Education Programme (REP) for refugee children was rolled out in 12 pilot provinces. The REP is designed to support children in grades 3 and 4 reach literacy and numeracy skills at primary education level, so that they can successfully transition to lower secondary education. In Lebanon, the Ministry of Education and Higher Education (MEHE) has launched the Inclusive Education programme which will be piloted in 30 public schools. Additionally, about 10,000 children were registered in the 2018 first round of the Accelerated Learning Programme (ALP) in 38 schools. In Jordan, oversight and quality assurance of camp schools were strengthened with the establishment of supervisory units and within the Learning for All campaign, messages on the importance of education were disseminated to refugees in camps and host communities. In Iraq, provision of incentives to volunteer teacher and education personnel continued to ensure that education services are not disrupted and in Egypt, education grants were disbursed to help vulnerable refugee children access education

HIGHLIGHTS

National health systems across the region continue to be the primary responders to the needs of Syrian refugees. Notwithstanding this generous response, the health needs of Syrian refugees remain high across the region in relation to primary, secondary and tertiary health care, reproductive care and prevention and response to communicable non-communicable diseases, among others. Access to services can be limited, not only by capacity in the health system but also financial capacity of refugees. In Lebanon, 11 per cent of Syrian refugee households that required health care services were not able to access them in 2017, mainly due to treatment costs. In Iraq, 56 per cent of households report encountering access issues including cost, unavailability of service or distance to the service.

HIGHLIGHTS

The Basic Needs Sector's strategy continues to promote linkages with the Livelihoods Sector to further reinforce efforts towards integration of refugees into the economies of their host communities, while simultaneously providing complementary support directly to the most vulnerable families. The proportion of refugees living outside of camps who are below the poverty line is very high: 80 per cent in Jordan; 76 per cent in Lebanon; and 64 per cent in Turkey. The Sector continues its strategic shift towards cash-based interventions, primarily through ATM cards and vouchers, to help refugees and host community members meet the needs of their households. This highlights the commitment of 3RP Partners to the agreements made under the Grand Bargain at the World Humanitarian Summit to increase the proportion of assistance delivered through cash modalities. Cash assistance provides greater dignity and choice for refugees, while providing benefits to the local economies where refugees are spending the cash they receive under these programmes.

HIGHLIGHTS

Of the 5.3 million registered Syrian refugees across the region, around 456,000 (9 per cent) live in camps while almost 4.9 million (91 per cent) live in host communities in urban, peri-urban and rural areas. The shelter situation for those refugees living in host communities varies greatly. Some live in rented accommodation or stay with relatives, while others are living in unsatisfactory conditions in unfinished buildings, garages, worksites or informal settlements. The shelter strategy provides for immediate humanitarian assistance to improve the living conditions of refugees and host community members living in temporary or substandard accommodation. In Lebanon, only six per cent of those living in rented accommodation have a rental contract. In Jordan this figure is 20 per cent, while in Iraq it ranges from five per cent to 34 per cent across the three Governorates of the Kurdistan Region of Iraq (KR-I).

HIGHLIGHTS

As of end November 2017, out of the 5.3 million Syrian refugees in the region, nine per cent were living in camps. In these camps and in informal settlements, refugees are supported by WASH interventions in Lebanon, Turkey, Iraq and Jordan. Refugees living in host communities, which in some towns represent a large proportion of the total population, continue to exert pressure on water, sanitation and waste management services. This pressure has been partly alleviated through interventions and support from the WASH Sector Partners. With further declines in the overall funding situation, in addition to other factors, the WASH situation for Syrian refugees in camps continues to be difficult.

HIGHLIGHTS

Despite considerable progress made in issuing work permits for refugees in Turkey and Jordan during 2017, the living conditions of Syrian refugees and vulnerable host community members have not been improved owing to the high rate of inflation in Egypt, slow GDP growth, limited job availability and a lack of access to jobs by the refugees in most host countries. While there are signs of economic recovery in the region, the unemployment rate remains high in these countries; 11.98 per cent in Egypt, 10.2 per cent in Turkey, 13.8 per cent in Jordan, 16 per cent in Iraq and 6.8 per cent in Lebanon For 2018, the Livelihoods Sector will prioritise: enhancing employability of refugees and host community members, creating employment or income generating opportunities, fostering a business environment for job creation, and promoting social stability.
