What protection risks do refugees from Ukraine face?

As almost all refugees from Ukraine arriving in Poland are women, children and older people, the high level of distress, family separation resulting in large numbers of unaccompanied and separated children and single parents, and risks of gender-based violence, sexual exploitation and abuse are multiplied. Trafficking risks by those who might try to exploit refugees' vulnerability with promises of free transport, accommodation, employment or other forms of assistance are heightened. UNHCR's work to protect refugees in Poland includes information and communication with communities, identification of people with specific needs, referrals to specialised services and legal counselling. These interventions are increasingly tailored to specific groups, including the LGBTIQ+ community, people with disability, isolated older persons, minorities, and women and girls at risk.

How does UNHCR help to protect refugees from Ukraine?

UNHCR works with authorities and partners to promote legal and physical protection for refugees, helping them to reach safety, identifying those in need of support — like women at risk, children separated from their parents or other family members, persons with disabilities, and older people without support.

UNHCR staff and partners in Poland speak with refugees in person, via phone and online to find out what kind of support they need and use these findings to shape their operational response. This protection monitoring and mapping the needs of people forced to flee is an essential activity to understand their ever-changing situation during an emergency and enables UNHCR to allocate aid where it is needed most, as well as engage host communities, authorities and partners more effectively by advising them about the refugee needs.

UNHCR leads the overarching refugee coordination structure in Poland, including the Protection Sector, the Child Protection and Gender-Based Violence sub-sectors, the Accountability to Affected Populations working group, and the Mental Health and Psychosocial Support Technical working group and PSEA (Protection from Sexual Exploitation and Abuse) network. Its protection presence is mainstreamed across other sectors and working groups, including on cash, trafficking, third country nationals, education, health.

Information and communication

Compared to initial arrivals, refugees arriving now in Poland are less resourced, more disoriented, distressed, and without an onward plan, due to lack of information and inability to meet their basic needs. To address critical gaps in information, UNHCR has set up and regularly updates a UNHCR HELP page for Poland, which has become the most visited HELP page worldwide, including from within Ukraine. UNHCR has also a child-friendly HELP page in English, Polish and Ukrainian. UNHCR has developed and circulates practical, safety and legal information to refugees at border points, in reception centres and urban areas, in the form of leaflets, posters, digital materials, social media and via apps like Telegram, which are widely used by people from Ukraine.

Blue Dots

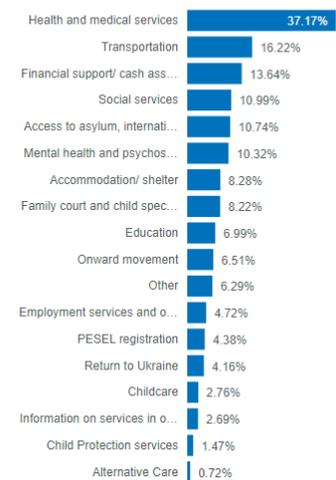

The Blue Dot Safe Space, Protection, and Support Hubs, established by UNHCR and UNICEF, bring together critical protection services and information for refugees from Ukraine, with a particular focus on supporting persons at heightened risk. These include unaccompanied or separated children, persons with disabilities, cases of suspected trafficking, survivors of gender-based violence and marginalized refugees including from minorities such as the Roma minority and LGBTIQ+ refugees. The Blue Dots aim at identification of persons with specific needs, information provision, guidance and counselling and referral to more specialized services. Referrals are made to the existing national services, including health centres, psychosocial support lines and services within the child protection systems.

Where are the Blue Dots and who works at them?

Blue Dots are strategically located where refugees are, including border points, reception sites, and urban centers. In cities, UNHCR has established Blue Dots linked to existing cash enrolment centres which have been resources to identify persons at heightened risk. As of 29 July, 9 Blue Dots are providing services across Poland in addition to 2 longer-term inclusive community centres in Rzeszow and Lublin. Protection staff, social workers, mental health and psychosocial support personnel, legal aid providers and interpreters operate these hubs to provide information, assistance and refer to specialized services to access further support.
