

Cuba

May - June 2022

Cuba is not a State party to international refugee instruments. UNHCR provides international protection to refugees under its mandate. With support from the government, UNHCR ensures that refugees are protected against refoulement and that they access healthcare and education services.

Local integration opportunities are limited, and most refugees are in need of resettlement as their only durable solution. Resettlement opportunities are also limited.

Vulnerabilities of asylum-seekers and refugees have further increased due to the COVID-19 related social and economic downturn, among other factors, including shortages of basic items (like food and medicine), affecting refugees and host communities alike.

Population of concern

201 refugees under UNHCR's mandate
(as of 30 June 2022)

51% of refugees do not have a migratory status granted by the government. Of these, 22 per cent of them are women and children

87 people in need of resettlement

Main nationalities

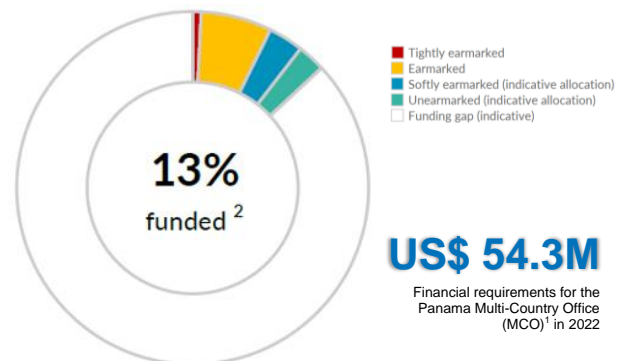

Syria, Afghanistan, Yemen, Ethiopia, Iran, Sudan

CONTEXT

With governmental consent, UNHCR processes asylum claims under its mandate. While refugees can access free healthcare and education services, all those who arrived with tourist visas are not granted a migratory status and cannot engage in income-generating activities, making them fully dependant on UNHCR assistance. The COVID-19 pandemic worsen their socio-economic situation, with difficulties to access food, hygiene items, and medicines. As a result of UNHCR's advocacy, the government granted refugees and asylum-seekers access to the governmental rationing system and the national COVID-19 vaccination programme, on equal footing as nationals.

UNHCR continues participating in the UN Sustainable Development Cooperation Framework signed with the Cuban government, as well as in the UN Socio-Economic COVID-19 Response Plan to protect vulnerable groups, including refugees and asylum-seekers.

STATE OF PLAY: FUNDING RECEIVED VS. FUNDING NEEDS (AS OF 5 JULY 2022)

On World Refugee Day, UNHCR and UNICEF co-sponsored a cultural and recreational activity aimed to promote the interaction of Cuban and refugee children. The children visited two museums and a community center for teenagers in Old Havana, where they participated in various games, painting and other artistic performances.

The activity continued at the A+ Espacios Adolescentes Center, of the Historian of the City of Havana Office, where children and adults enjoyed the performance of the puppet project Polichinela de La Habana.
