

SOUTH SUDAN Regional Refugee Response Plan

January - December 2023

AT A GLANCE

The South Sudan Regional Refugee Response Plan (RRP) is an annual comprehensive multi-agency response that outlines the strategies and actions needed to respond to the ongoing South Sudan refugee crisis in the five main countries of asylum: the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC), Ethiopia, Kenya, Sudan and Uganda. In 2023, it includes the financial requirements of 108 partners, involving a range of UN and NGO/ civil society humanitarian and development actors, to meet the critical needs of over 2.2 million refugees and asylum-seekers and 1.89 million members of their hosting communities. The interagency response plan is developed according to the Refugee Coordination Model (RCM) and draws from the response plans developed in each country.

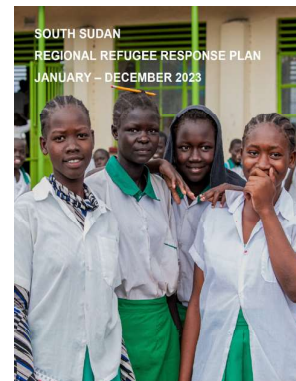

It reflects the regional protection needs, vulnerabilities and risks facing the population with over 50 per cent being children (0-17 years) and 33 per cent of the population being youth (between 15-24 years). Some of the vulnerabilities and risk stem from exposure to endemic violence and the impact of climate shocks in the country of origin and others are magnified by prolonged displacement in situations where the needs outstrip the available resources for assistance, compounded by environments not conducive to self-reliance.

PROJECTED SOUTH SUDANESE REFUGEE POPULATION

The strategy to protect and find solutions for South Sudanese refugees and asylum-seekers builds on preserving asylum space in the region and expanding it to include freedom of movement and settlement options outside camps. It promotes the alignment of national and regional approaches with international commitments such as the Global Compact on Refugees, which covers the inclusion of refugees into national systems such as health, education and the economy. The inclusion of refugees and other forcibly displaced into climate adaptation strategies is also key in light of the impact of climate change in the region. The essence of the strategy is to promote self-reliance and protect the rights of South Sudanese refugees and asylum seekers. The strategy is underpinned by efforts to strengthen integrity and accountability in delivering protection and solutions.

The Regional RRP covers nine sectors: protection (which includes the sub-sectors of gender-based violence (GBV) and Child Protection), education, food, health and nutrition, livelihoods, resilience and socio-economic inclusion, WASH, shelter and NFI, energy and environment and logistics and operational support. The regional chapter outlines the summary of sector response interventions which may vary according to the context in each country as well as provides a regional overview of the partnerships and coordination efforts as well as financial requirements. Each country-specific response is outlined in more detail under dedicated country chapters.

2023 STRATEGIC OBJECTIVES

SO1: Maintaining asylum space and enhancing protection and realization of the rights of South Sudanese refugees and asylum-seekers;

SO2: Including South Sudanese refugees and asylum-seekers into national systems;

SO3: Enhancing sustainable and durable solutions for South Sudanese refugees and asylum-seekers;

SO4: Providing quality, efficient and timely protection and life-saving multisectoral assistance to South Sudanese refugees and asylum-seekers and their host communities;

SO5: Enhancing accountability and addressing core protection risks.

REGIONAL COORDINATION

The 2023 Regional Refugee Response Plan RRP has 108 partners of which 65 per cent are International NGOs (INGOs), 24 per cent National NGOs and 10 per cent of the partners are UN Agencies. In addition to the UN, a number of the INGOs work in more than one country of the response. The diversity of partners enables the RRP partners to approach the 2023 response with the wealth of lessons learnt and relationships with persons of concern, governments and regional bodies.
