

Ocotepeque

Ocotepeque, on the western edge of Honduras, is a critical border point for refugees and migrants in mixed movements, including individuals in need of international protection. UNHCR conducts border monitoring and provides protection services in key communities along the border.

Due to the unprecedented numbers of people in mixed movements there is an increased need for basic services for people in mixed movements. Needs include protection information, WASH, health, food and shelter services. Hondurans who have been forcibly displaced also have unmet basic needs.

The situation at the western border is likely to evolve with continued regional migration shifts. UNHCR will continue to maintain an active field presence and coordination leadership to support people in mixed movements, addressing both immediate needs and longer-term protection challenges.

Context

UNHCR's Field Unit in Ocotepeque covers three departments that border El Salvador and Guatemala: Copán, Lempira, and Ocotepeque. According to UNHCR's monitoring, an average of 15,000 people in mixed movements leave weekly through regular and irregular border points, such as Agua Caliente and El Florido. Some of these individuals are choosing to seek international protection in Honduras rather than continue to the north. To achieve this goal, UNHCR supports the relevant authorities to facilitate access to international protection for those in need. Additionally, these departments also receive forcibly displaced people who are escaping violent situations in other parts of the country.

Working with Partners

UNHCR works with Medicos del Mundo, World Vision, NRC, Hermanas Scalabrinianas, the Secretariat of Childhood, Adolescence and Family (SENAF), the National Commission for Human Rights (CONADEH), the National Institute for Migration (INM), and the Secretariat for Human Rights (SEDH).

UNHCR and ADRA co-lead the Local Team coordination group to address the needs of people in mixed movements, and UNHCR leads the Local Protection Group for the Western Border.

UNHCR also supports the municipalities of Ocotepeque, Santa Fe, Sinuapa and La Labor in strengthening the response for the host community and people in mixed movements in those areas.

Main Activities

Protection

UNHCR continuously monitors the flows of people in mixed movements passing through border points such as Agua Caliente, El Florido, and El Paraíso, Copán to identify individuals in need of protection and provide crucial information and advice on international protection. Efforts are focused on strengthening state services related to international protection, displacement prevention, and gender-based violence through training for local authorities. UNHCR also provides information services to mitigate protection risks for people in mixed movements at cross-border points from the country, including through a Mobile Information Service jointly operated with World Vision in Machuca, Agua Caliente. Additionally, UNHCR supports the Secretariat of Childhood, Adolescence and Family (SENAF) to provide protection services for unaccompanied children and victims of human rights violations.

Health and Legal Protection

UNHCR, in partnership with Doctors of the World, provides case management services for survivors of gender-based violence in the entire Department of Ocotepeque, ensuring psychosocial support, referral to services, and follow-up until case closure to ensure the rights of the survivors.

Shelter and NFIs

UNHCR supports the operation of the Migrant House in Ocotepeque and enhances the technical capacities of staff from Migrant Houses in Ocotepeque and El Paraíso, Copán, to identify individuals in need of international protection and forced displacement. Ocotepeque's Migrant House serves an average of 50 people per week, providing essential shelter and support services. UNHCR distributes hygiene items to returned individuals and those in mixed movements at border points such as Agua Caliente and El Florido, aiming to support vulnerable populations with their basic needs.

Community Empowerment and Self-Reliance

UNHCR implements a community-based protection strategy named Digital Literacy to disseminate knowledge on prevention and mitigation of digital risks for adolescents and women’s networks exposed to gender-based violence and trafficking risks. The project includes initiatives such as the “Mobile Library”, engaging children from schools in border communities to promote digital literacy and communication. Moreover, UNHCR continues supporting the Youth Network of the Ocotepeque and Copán department in western Honduras to prevent internal displacement and gender-based violence among youth in the region. UNHCR facilitates weekly artistic activities in the Las Lajitas neighbourhood in San Marcos to promote peaceful coexistence between the host community and internally displaced people, fostering social cohesion and combating stigmatization. The COMUNYCARTE project, coordinated between the local municipality and UNHCR, engages families and communities to promote understanding and integration.

Durable Solutions

UNHCR has referred cases of people internally displaced or at risk of displacement to livelihood programmes with partners who promote protection through entrepreneurship and job placement internships for youth and with counterparts in vocational training processes.

UNHCR promotes “Mobile Library” in schools and community spaces to engage children and youth into digital literacy.
