

Why do we need to talk about land rights when thinking of refugee livelihood?

Access to Livelihoods and Agricultural Productivity

Land provides the foundation for livelihoods and recognizing and enforcing legitimate land rights enhances agricultural productivity.

Resilience and Self-Reliance

Land ownership empowers refugees to build resilience and self-reliance.

Conflict Prevention

Clear land rights reduce tensions between host communities and refugees.

Gender Equality

Land rights are especially critical for female-headed households.

2023 UNHCR Global Survey on Livelihoods and Economic Inclusion

Survey collects information on the economic landscapes of displaced and stateless persons and delves into the enabling environments in UNHCR country operations. Provides with a solid evidence base to communicate and advocate at country, regional and global levels.

Outreach 2023 – 2019

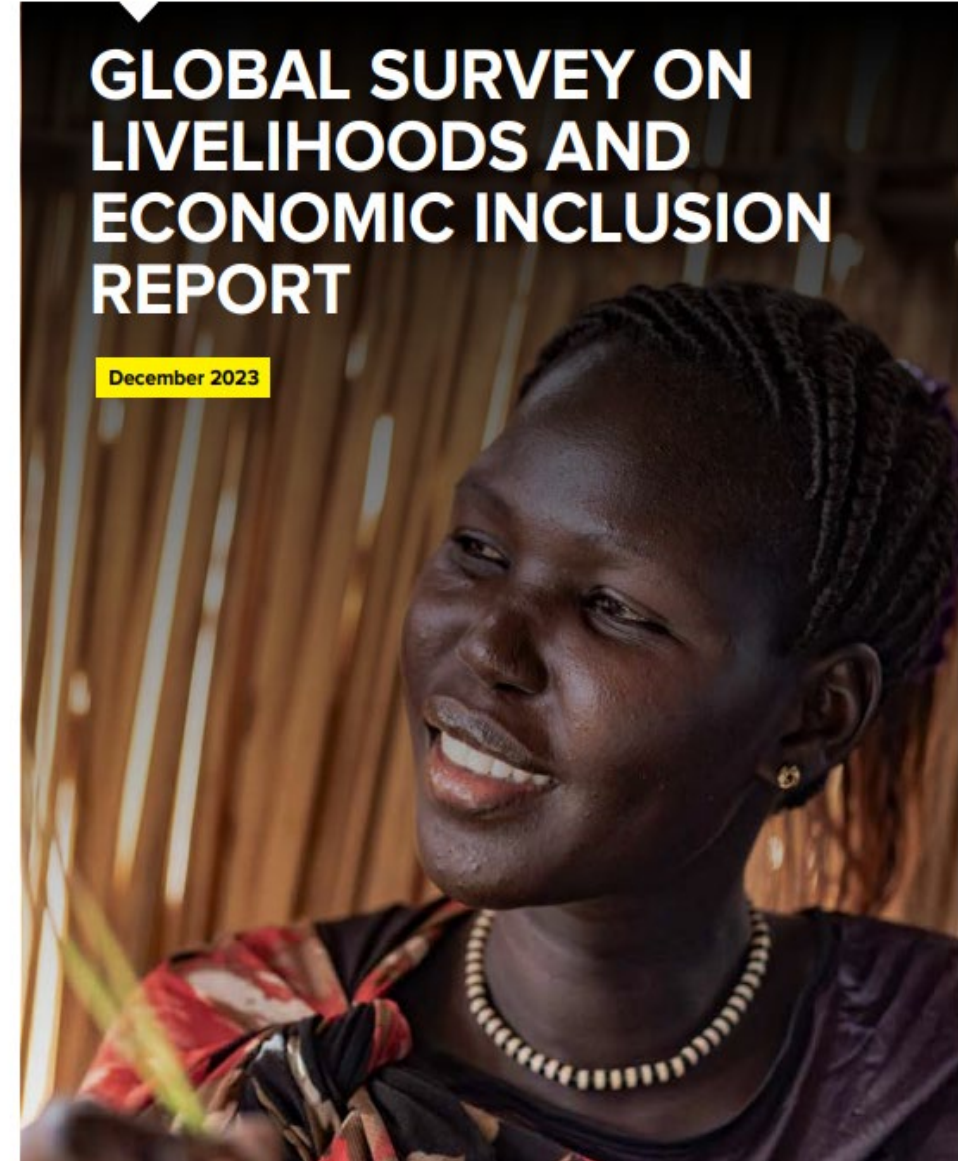

Global Findings on Economic Inclusion, Employment, Entrepreneurship and Self-employment, Technical and Vocational Education and Training (TVET), Land for Agriculture, Climate Adaptation, Inclusion in Digital Economy, Financial Inclusion, Social Assistance and Social Insurance.

Global survey on livelihoods and economic inclusion report \(December 2023\) | UNHCR

GLOBAL SURVEY ON LIVELIHOODS AND ECONOMIC INCLUSION REPORT

December 2023

Land for Agriculture

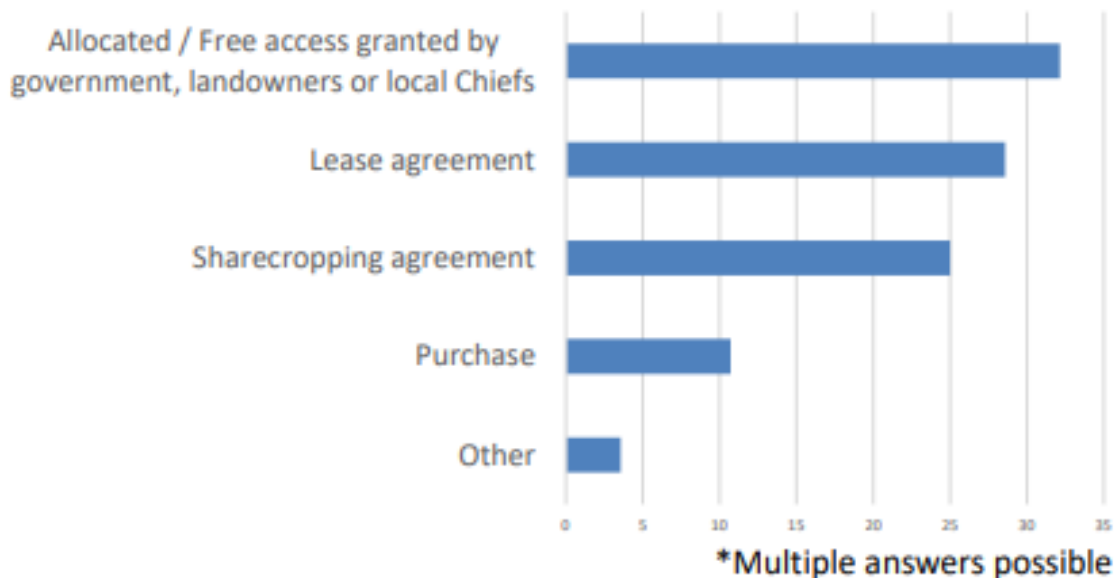

Main land tenure system in place	EHAGL - Percentage of countries reporting system
Private	40%
Communal	30%
State	20%
Other	10%

Main land tenure system in place	GLOBAL - Percentage of countries reporting system
Private	68%
State	10%
Communal	6%
Open access	6%

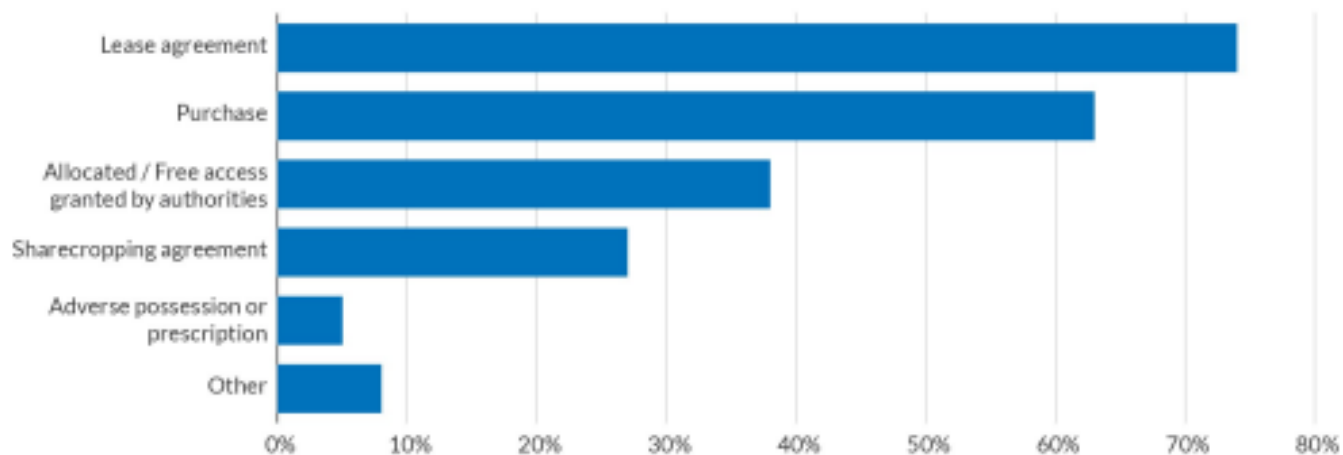

Modalities to secure access to land for agriculture

EHAGL - Percentage of countries reporting means of securing access to land for agriculture, per type

GLOBAL:

Percentage of countries reporting means of securing access to land for agriculture, per type

Note: multiple answers possible

*Multiple answers possible