1. Recent Developments:

- The Jordanian government is planning to reduce the size of the Zaatari Camp in the wake of recent violence there. The final projected capacity of the camp is being downsized from 80,000 to 60,000 persons following riots last week that caused extensive damage. The camp currently houses some 38,000 Syrians. Meanwhile more than 40,000 refugees entered Jordan in two months as the security conditions in Syria are excessively deteriorating with more than 110,000 registered and awaiting registration with UNHCR.
- A group of seven Alawite officers defected to Jordan earlier, according to the Free Syrian Army that facilitated the defection. Former senior officials in the Syrian intelligence services and military were received by Jordanian authorities upon their arrival and transferred to a guarded safe house in the northern region, raising the total number of defections to 10 Alawite officers and over 3000 Syrian defectors currently residing in Jordan.

that has been left as a result of pulling back a number of the field hospitals because of the sabotage acts that took place recently in the camp.

- The Mafraq governor has said that since the beginning of the Syrian crisis, there are 600,000 Syrians who are residing in Jordan, 200,000 are refugees and 400,000 entered legally through the official borders. He noted that 40,000 urban Syrians are residing in the governorate which are badly affecting the local communities' work chances and infrastructure.
- The Bahrain Education Centre is scheduled to open to Syrian students at the Zaatari Camp before the end of this month and includes four separate schools with a 4,000 student capacity, which the ministry of education in cooperation with UNICEF will oversee and supervise. The Centre will include 4 primary and secondary schools in addition to medical labs, sports playgrounds, teachers and administrative offices.

Syrian refugees since the beginning of the crisis with a total amount of JD 3 million.

- The Jordan Hashemite Charity Organization (JHCO) has received humanitarian assistance extended by the Austrian government for Syrian refugees. The assistance included 2,000 blankets and 20 special heating units for tents, which will be distributed to Syrians in the Zaatari Refugee Camp in the coming days.
- JHCO has also received humanitarian assistance for Syrian refugees from the Slovakian government. The aid that included eating utensils and blankets, was a response to the joint appeal launched in August by Jordan and international relief organizations to help Syrian refugees in Jordan.
- The UAE Red Crescent Society presented four buses to the International Organization for Migration (IOM) to ease the burden of transporting Syrian refugees from their gathering point after crossing the Jordanian-Syrian border to the Zaatari Camp in Mafraq. The buses are the second batch of a donation from the society that included six buses and two ambulances.
- At least 16,000 Syrian refugees benefited from the services of the Moroccan field hospital, which was established by the Moroccan armed forces in the Zaatari Camp. The hospital services include all types of tests, surgical operations, birthing in addition to providing medicines. Children and women are the majority of beneficiaries from the hospital services.
