Over the last three days, Aarsal's hillside has been subjected to recurrent air raids. The heightened security situation in the area temporarily prevented humanitarian agencies from accessing the town and responding to the needs of the newly-arrived refugees.

Local authorities and partners have responded to the most pressing needs. Newly arrived families received bread, food kits, plastic sheeting and other relief items through local partners and available contingency stock.

The aim is to ensure that these settlements meet technical shelter and hygiene standards.

Refugees living in informal tented settlements in Aarsal received plastic sheeting and information sessions on preventive measures against flooding and hygiene.
