In one of the schools, which is supported by the Religious Affairs Foundation, about 1,200 Syrian children are registered. - In Sanliurfa, Support to Life (STL) informed that while they are still conducting group discussions with Syrians to decide on activities to implement in their community center, they are also considering to hire a kindergarten teacher and to allocate one room in the center to be used as kindergarten and day-care for children between 3- 6 years.
- Malteser International informed that they are funding both the clinic and community center run by International Blue Crescent (IBC) in Kilis for non-camp Syrians. The clinic is providing health care to post operation cases and reportedly it is considering to expand its capacity with an additional 20 beds.
