- 2% of households live in emergency shelters, which are tents.

2. Sustainable, adequate shelter and community infrastructure is available for vulnerable Syrian refugees and impacted community members

63% of the refugee population in the KR-I is living outside of camps.

90% of households living outside camps live in houses or apartments.

84% of households do not share their accommodation with another family.

NEEDS ANALYSIS

The sector continues to address gaps by upgrading shelter, maintaining and rehabilitating infrastructure in camps. In 2018 the sector will continue activities started in 2017 by giving appropriate access to adequate shelter and infrastructure, improving infrastructure for refugees living within the local communities and providing support to camp coordination and camp management.

Out of camps, 90% of households in the KR-I host community were renting house or apartments. Provision of adequate and targeted shelter support to refugees residing out of camps requires increased attention as needs remain very high.
