

What is the GIFMM in Colombia?

The Interagency Group for Mixed Migration Flows (GIFMM in its Spanish acronym) was created at the end of 2016 by the International Organisation for Migration (IOM) and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) to respond to the increasing flow of people arriving from Venezuela. The group coordinates the national response to the situation of refugees and migrants in Colombia. It currently has 46 members.

A Venezuelan family lives in an informal settlement in Arauca while they wait for information on their refugee status.

What are the objectives of the GIFMM?

- To serve as a coordination space for its members with the purpose of facilitating a joint operational response that supports the efforts of the Colombian state, based on the rights of those in need of international protection and the migrant population.
- Seek to ensure that refugees and migrants have equality in access to services and available humanitarian resources without discrimination or distinction of age, gender and diversity.
- Advocate for the principles of humanitarian protection with a focus on rights, at an individual and community level, to promote positive and constructive relations with host communities.

How does the GIFMM coordinate with the regional platform, and other coordination spaces in Colombia?

The GIFMM is the national expression of the Regional Platform for Refugees and Migrants from Venezuela and is responsible for the implementation of the Colombia Chapter of the Regional Plan (RMRP). The GIFMM works with the existing interagency coordination spaces that are relevant to their functions, seeking to organize back-to-back meetings to avoid duplication wherever possible. At the national level, the GIFMM works closely with the Resident Coordinator in strategic and political coordination. At the local level, GIFMMs ensure a coherent and effective response.

What are local GIFMMs?

- Local GIFMMs are expressions of the national platform at the departmental level.
- They serve as spaces for strategic coordination of the operational response at a local level, working in close partnership with the government.
- There are currently 9 local GIFMMs, covering 12 departments: La Guajira, Cesar, Nariño, Norte de Santander, Arauca, Atlántico (covers Bolívar and Magdalena), Valle del Cauca, Bogotá and Antioquia.
