A brief review of how UNICEF's Action against Gender-based Violence affecting Refugee and Migrant women and children in Bulgaria, Greece, Italy and Serbia programme has responded to COVID-19

Introduction

This brief looks at the impact of COVID-19 on UNICEF's ongoing gender-based violence (GBV) programme in Bulgaria, Greece, Italy and Serbia. The programme has supported the impact of the pandemic on GBV survivors and service providers, including the impact of the pandemic on the identification of unaccompanied and separated girls (UAGs) in Bulgaria, Greece, Italy and Serbia.

Regional Refugee and Migrant Response to GBV

Regional Refugee and Migrant Response to GBV (RRMG) is a joint initiative of UNICEF, UNHCR, and the European Union. It aims to provide a coordinated response to the needs of refugees and migrants, with a focus on gender-based violence. The RRMG programme is implemented in Bulgaria, Greece, Italy and Serbia.

UNICEF's GBV programme provides ongoing support to survivors and service providers in the region. The programme is implemented in Bulgaria, Greece, Italy and Serbia. The programme provides support to survivors and service providers, including the impact of the pandemic on the identification of UAGs in Bulgaria, Greece, Italy and Serbia.
