Police District (PD) # 13 is consisting of Dashti Barchi, Puli Khushk, Shahrak Haji Nawroz, Shahrak Omid Sabz, Shahrak Etefaq and other surrounded informal settlements. This flat expanse to the West of the Kabul city where is an area of new settlement, carved out of PD # 6 in 2003 when residents started to pour in. Previously, it was partly agricultural and partly barren, with only a few hamlets. The area is now densely populated; most of the settlements are informal and the municipality provides limited infrastructure. Residents are mainly newcomers from the provinces or low-income. Kabul is lured here by the cheaper cost of property. However, affluent investors have developed some high-profile Shahraks (townships). The area is inhabited mostly by Hazaras ethnic group who migrated to Kabul from Maidan Wardak, Bamyán, Daikundi and Ghazni after 2001. The area has been subject to the periodic influx of IDPs; the IDPs who did not return to their place of origin are settled with relatives. A smaller number of Pashtun Kuchis (nomads) had started to settle in the area, too. The residents of the Shahraks are more mixed. In terms of vulnerability, PD #13 faces numerous challenges. The area has a high population density, with an estimated population of over 1 million people. This puts a strain on infrastructure and public services, making it difficult to meet the needs of the growing population. The area also suffers from inadequate housing, with many residents living in informal settlements or slums with limited access to basic services such as water, sanitation, and electricity.
