Child Protection (CP) attended Save the Children's Child Protection Committee (CPC) Conference on 22 December following a project implemented by Save the children which aimed at linking Syrian refugee communities to CPCs under their district, raising awareness of services available by CPCs and developing communication mechanism for further cooperation. In preparation for a presentation before the CPSWG, CP and Livelihood Unit explored on 31 December how best to integrate unaccompanied and separated children, particularly those aging out, in the Graduation Approach. The invitation for submission was extended in the Egyptian Child Protection Network (ECPN) of which UNHCR is a member.

NEEDS ANALYSIS:

Updated data on registered refugees is needed for profiling and programming purposes. A verification exercise has begun in May 2014. In addition, UNHCR will conduct a survey in order to have a better overview of protection gaps, in particular among the most vulnerable.

By the end of April 2014, UNICEF increased its Child Friendly Spaces outside greater Cairo from three to seven. However, child-friendly spaces remain insufficient to cover all the refugee population across Egypt and the capacity to conduct Best Interest Assessments for all separated children is limited, including regular monitoring visits for most separated children. UNICEF is waiting for government approval to open Child-friendly spaces in Damietta, where none currently exist. There continues to be few programmes assisting refugee youth, as well as children with disabilities.

The operational capacity of partners remains largely concentrated in Greater Cairo and to some extent Alexandria, affecting services to sexual gender based violence (SGBV) survivors in particular. CARE International plans to expand its services, including case management, to Alexandria after June 2014. Damietta, where the third largest concentration of Syrian refugees, remains without similar services. Challenges remain in identifying legal aid partners with sufficient coverage of major and smaller urban centers around the country.
