

With the conflict in Syria now entering its fifth year, the situation of more than 5.6 million children inside the country remains desperate. There are up to 2 million children who are living in areas of the country largely cut off from humanitarian assistance due to fighting or other factors. Some 2 million children in Syria are still out of school.

UNICEF is calling for: i) An end to the conflict; ii) More support to learning; iii) More protection for those at risk; iv) Stop the direct involvement of children in the conflict; v) Move investment in adolescents and youth; and vi) Increased support to host communities.
