PROTECTION TRENDS

- 17,221 Nigerian returnees have arrived from Cameroon through the border town of Sahuda, where they are registered and then taken to Mubi, for security screening. They are then transported either to: Malkohi, NYSC or Fufore camps in Yola; to Borno State; or to host communities. Key protection issues include returnees being forced back to Nigeria without even the opportunity for them to bring their belongings, as well as family separation, as some were sent back to Nigeria while their families remain in Cameroon. More Nigerians are expected to continue to be expelled from Cameroon in the coming weeks. A contingency plan to respond to the needs of the Nigerian returnees is being developed by the Adamawa PSWG.
- Over 300,000 IDPs in Adamawa have returned to local governments of habitual residence where they remain in need of urgent assistance. When and where returns of IDPs take place, livelihoods and reconstruction support will be necessary as well as mine risk education activities concerning awareness as to international/local marking systems and appropriate safe behavior when finding a mine/explosive remnant of war.
- Cholera outbreak in Maiduguri, Borno, with 1039 cases and 18 deaths as of November 22nd, contributing to serious protection concerns.

CHALLENGES

- Plan to immediately relocate 55,000 IDPs staying in schools in Maiduguri raises concerns as to adequate alternative shelter and services in receiving camps.
- Major gaps in ensuring protection of and assistance to “invisible” IDPs living in host communities.
- An estimated 3 million affected civilians in need of humanitarian assistance are in locations that are not regularly accessible to humanitarian partners due to security concerns.
- Targeted response to the needs of most vulnerable individuals requires scaling up.
- Immediate, medium-term and long-term support to address the impact of trauma and physical violence on immediate survivors and secondary victims, including unwanted pregnancies and associated stigma to enhance reintegration into communities/families.
- Limited presence of child protection and SGBV actors in host communities in Borno, Adamawa and Yobe is hindering the identification and response to the needs of children at risk and survivors, and SGBV survivors among displaced population.

GOALS

- Ensure predictable, accountable and effective coordination of protection response at the National and State levels.
- Ensure the centrality of protection in the humanitarian response in Nigeria through effective mainstreaming of protection in all humanitarian sectors.
- Ensure that PSWG members are accountable to affected populations through consultative and feedback mechanisms.

OBJECTIVES

- To ensure that gaps in the response to protection issues are systematically identified and addressed including through protection monitoring activities and participation in joint assessments.
- To advocate for a protective environment for vulnerable groups such as displaced persons, survivors and those at risk of sexual and gender-based violence, children and young persons, persons with disabilities and older persons.
- To support HCT’s advocacy work in protection including compliance with international standards on durable solutions.
- To provide targeted trainings and capacity building on protection for humanitarian actors, authorities and other relevant actors.
- To support the effective mainstreaming of protection in all humanitarian sectors.
- To provide support and guidance to sub-sector working groups and PSWGs at the State-level.
