Government Invites Wa, Mongla Groups to Peace Dialogue

The Irrawaddy, 23 December 2015

The government has invited leaders of the Wa and Mongla special regions to attend the Union Peace Conference scheduled to convene on Jan. 12, an invitation that de facto applies to the United Wa State Army (UWSA), Burma's largest ethnic armed group, and the National Democratic Alliance Army.

The UWSA is a non-signatory to Burma's so-called nationwide ceasefire agreement, which was signed by the government and eight non-state armed groups on Oct. 15.

Non-signatories have been offered the opportunity to attend with "observer" status, a senior member of the government-affiliated Myanmar Peace Center (MPC) told The Irrawaddy this week.

Daw Aung San Suu Kyi meets eight ceasefire signatories

Myanmar Times, 18 December 2015

Daw Aung San Suu Kyi yesterday reassured the eight ceasefire signatories that her party supports the peace process even if it didn't endorse the accord as a witness or send a representative to the signing ceremony.

The National League for Democracy leader met with representatives from eight ethnic armed groups at the hluttaw compound in Nay Pyi Taw.

In addition to the PLO, representatives from the Karen National Union, the KNU/KNLA Peace Council, the Restoration Council of Shan State, the Democratic Karen Benevolent Army, the Chin National Front, the Arakan Liberation Party and the All Burma Students' Democratic Front attended the meeting.

In its manifesto, the NLD said “national reconciliation” is its top priority, though the party has revealed few details so far of how it intends to pursue the peace process.

Myanmar's Suu Kyi says peace talks will be priority

Bangkok post, 4 January 2016

Myanmar's Aung San Suu Kyi said Monday that bringing peace to the country's strife-wracked ethnic regions will be a priority for her government when it takes power.

"We have to build peace. Building peace is the first ever duty of a new government," she told supporters at the party's Rangoon headquarters on Monday, during a speech marking the country's Independence Day.

"We have to work to include everyone in a signed ceasefire agreement by holding a really effective peace conference," she added.

Suu Kyi has said her party supports a federal future and has made ethnic affairs and peace a central pillar of her party manifesto for Myanmar, where ethnic minority groups have fought decades-long wars for greater autonomy.

LAW AND GOVERNANCE

Aung San Suu Kyi's victorious NLD party will join parliament on February 1

South China Morning Post, 6 January 2016

Members of Aung San Suu Kyi's victorious pro-democracy party will take their seats in parliament on February 1, Myanmar's speaker said on Wednesday, beginning a new era for a nation under army rule for decades.

In a statement parliamentary speaker Shwe Mann announced that “all MPs [are] to start the new parliament at 10am on Monday February 1, 2016”.

But the new government will take office slowly under the complex political system – it can only be formed after current President Thein Sein steps down on March 31.

South Korea receives first refugees in pilot programme

UNHCR, 23 December 2015

Having learned some Korean through books and television shows to assist in their rapid integration, a first group of 22 Myanmar refugees from Thailand’s Mae La and Umpium camps landed in the Republic of Korea on Wednesday to a warm welcome and positive start to the country’s three-year pilot resettlement programme.

The four families will start their lives in South Korea at the Immigration Reception Centre located in Incheon, where they will stay for six to 12 months taking basic courses in the Korean language, culture and occupational skills. The Justice Ministry said that they are likely to live around Gyeonggi Province, adjacent to the capital Seoul, as there is already an existing Myanmar community in the area.

"With time, UNHCR hopes that South Korea will expand its resettlement programme to refugees from other regions and major emergencies around the world," said Dirk Hebecker, UNHCR's representative in South Korea.
