USAID Jordan Local Enterprise Support Project (LENS): HBB success stories, advantages of licensing, case studies in market integration

- Presentation on 50 HBBs pilot study's success stories, advantages of licencing, case studies in market integration.
- USAID operated an advisory role alongside Competence Management Consultancy (CMC), to ensure the building of a sustainable model for the 50 HBBs in their pilot study.
- A financial model, ensuring an acceptable profit margin, was designed to ensure the sustainability and longevity of the HBBs in this pilot study.
- Challenges of this pilot study:

Access to USAID LENS success stories here 1 and 2

○ Policy gaps ○ No specific categories for HBBs ○ Registration and licencing of a HBB and the tax payed, depends on the infrastructure of the house. – Variation in fees. ○ Staff members in municipalities outside of GAM have little knowledge on licencing and registration of HBBs for Syrians. Further lack of appropriate forms that include HBBs during the registration process. ○ Contradictions in instructions from Jordan Food and Drug Association (JFDA) and the new laws about HBBs making opening a HBB in the food sector difficult for both Syrians and Jordanians. ○ Sometimes it is easier to register and licence a HBB in some municipalities than others.
Draft advocacy points to the Ministry of Industry and Trade • Relax the process of registering HBBs at the Ministry of Industry and Trade (MoIT), then the licensing from Greater Amman Municipality (GAM) or other municipalities depending on the location of the HBB. Such license requires a registry at the Chamber of Industry and some other requirements that might be challenging in some cases depending on the HBB type and sector. • Relax the rules of obtaining 'Landlord approval' on establishing HBB, and advocate towards having 'property tax' being separate from licencing HBB • Reduce Ministry of Municipal Affairs fees required to license a HBB • JFDA instructions to allow food processing from home • Capacity building of municipalities staff, this would include awareness on HBB (LENS's plan)
AOB • None
